RESEARCH INTERESTS	Primary: Ecological Economics, Experimental Economics, Non-market Valuation Secondary: Public Finance, Econometrics, Policy Evaluation, Ecosystem Services
EDUCATION	PhD candidate, Leibniz University Hannover (June 2018 – 2022 exp.) Advisor: Bettina Matzdorf M.Sc. in Ecological Economics (with Distinction), University of Edinburgh (September 2017 – August 2018) M.Sc. in International Economics, University of Tübingen (October 2013 – October 2016) Visiting Student, Queen's University (September 2014 – April 2015) B.Sc. in International Economics, University of Tübingen (October 2009 – June 2013) Visiting Student, University of Guanajuato (August 2011 – June 2012)
WORK IN PROGRESS	“Discrete Choice Experiments informing environmental policies - A systematic review” Approaching the question of how Discrete Choice Experiments have been used to inform environmental policies, specifically the design of Payments for Ecosystem Services schemes. The focus will be set on studies conducted with Ecosystem Services providers and their particular preferences for varying contract attributes. “Stakeholder attitudes towards Payments for Ecosystem Services scheme design” Using Q-methodology, I will analyse stakeholder attitudes towards institutional design features of Payments for Ecosystem Services schemes to identify factors affecting farmers' uptake of conservation policies. “Institutional design of privately financed Payments for Ecosystem Services schemes” Conducting a Discrete Choice Experiment survey with German farmers, I will analyse landowners' preferences for the institutional design of privately financed Payments for Ecosystem Services schemes.
